DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This two story frame house probably began in the early 19th century with a side hall, single parlor plan. Sometime later a three bay, two story frame addition was attached to the west. This addition is one room, with a fireplace at the west end. There are three 6/6 sash windows on each floor on each of the north and south sides, and a window on either side of the chimney on the second floor. A two story addition now containing the stair extends north of the original stair hall. The original parlor has a window on the south, and a window above that on the second floor. The fireplace on the east wall of the parlor has an early 19th century mantel. The hall door has long panels with rounded heads. The entire house, once covered in brown shingles, is now sheathed in clapboards.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

A James Bartlett is believed to have lived here in the 1830's.

Avonwood is of interest in the survey of historic sites and places as a surviving portion of an early 19th century dwelling. Like Perry Hall and North Bend, Avonwood has been altered greatly from its original appearance. Originally it was a relatively simple vernacular farm house similar to Waverly or Bunker Hill Farm.
